

Why you need OPENDNS for the office

Contributed by Shawn Strickler
Thursday, 18 September 2008

OPENDNS has become such a great tool for small business over the last year or so because it does a pretty fairly decent job of filtering your office internet....for free. Not only is it a great web tool to help filter out your employees web pages, but it also helps protect them from malicious websites. OpenDNS has a domain blocking service which provides the ability to block/filter web sites visited based upon categories. This provides for corporate, educational and parental control over the type of sites that are deemed appropriate by you. OpenDNS also has the ability to override the filter through individually managed blacklists and whitelists. The whole setup process takes a few minutes but it's well worth it when you consider that you have just made your computers safer and increased the overall browsing speed.

{mos_smf_discuss:Blogs}